NCCI is a vital and robust network of change leaders who are devoted to continuous innovation and excellence in higher education.

Ellen Watson
Vice Provost and CIO
University of Wisconsin

“I came away with some methods that I think are going to really help groups generate creative ideas and come to agreements more quickly.”
Maury Cotter
Director of Strategic Planning and Quality Improvement
Cornell University

“We have turned to our NCCI colleagues on numerous occasions to learn what they are doing. Reaching out and learning from others enables us to gather information and implement new ideas much more quickly and effectively because we build off the successes of our colleagues.”
Kathryn Burkgren
Director, Organizational Development for Faculty & Staff
University of Memphis

NCCI is a non-profit association, dedicated to improving higher education. Through a professional network for change leadership, its vision is to help higher education institutions work collaboratively across institutions to employ effective methods to advance academic and administrative excellence.

Higher Education’s Network for Change

NCCI is a non-profit association, dedicated to improving higher education. Through a professional network for change leadership, its vision is to help higher education institutions work collaboratively across institutions to employ effective methods to advance academic and administrative excellence.

www.ncci-cu.org